Complaints Received by the Commission

After receiving dedicated funding for a case management system from the legislature, the Commission has been better equipped for tracking, monitoring, investigating, and responding to incoming complaints. Below is a breakdown of the office's current status of complaints including open complaints, pending complaints, closed complaints. Additionally, there is a breakdown of how many complaints the Commission has received from each correctional facility.

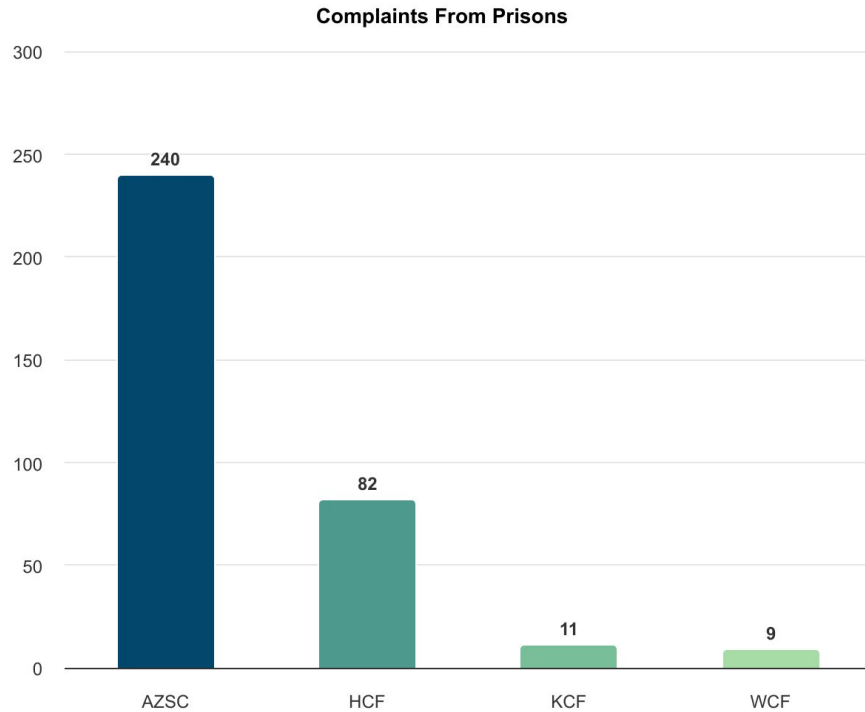

Complaint Status

Note: number of incoming complaints is subject to change as some letters may contain multiple complaints.

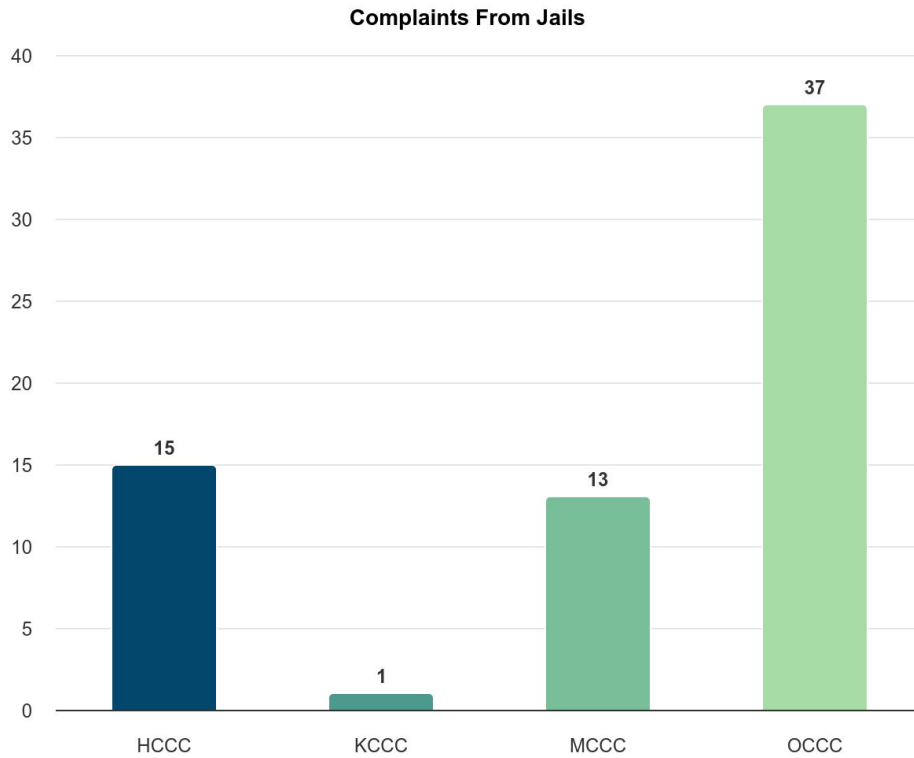

As of May 29, 2026, the Commission had 76 closed complaints and 248 complaints pending review and potential investigation. The Jail and Prison Oversight Specialists currently have 109 complaints that are open and being actively investigated, in addition to other assignments and projects that are critical to providing effective oversight, such as researching deaths in custody.

Complaints from Prison System

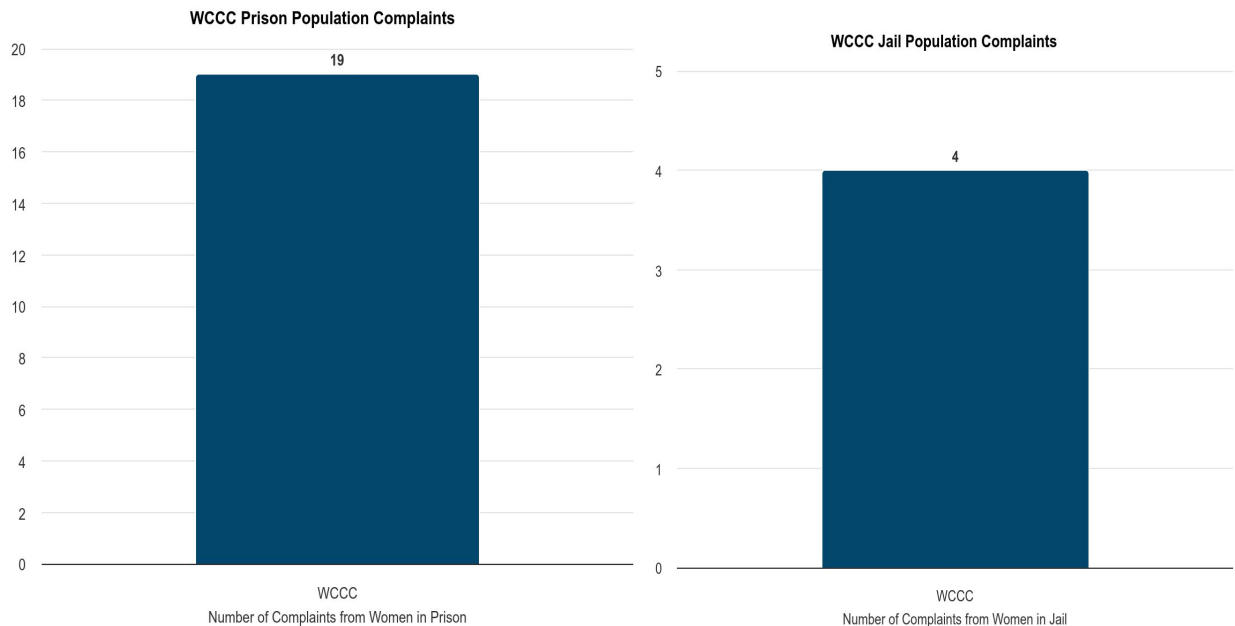

The Commission currently has a total of 342 complaints from the prison system (not including the Women’s facility which is detailed below). A total of 240 complaints came from Saguaro Correctional Center (AZSC), a privately run facility in Arizona, 82 complaints from Halawa Correctional Facility (HCF), 11 complaints from Kulani Correctional Facility (KCF), and 9 complaints from the Waiawa Correctional Facility (WCF).

Complaints from Jail System

The Commission currently has a total of 57 complaints from the jails (not including the Women’s facility which is detailed below). A total of 12 complaints came from the Hawaii Community Correctional Center (HCCC), one complaint from the Kauai Community Correctional Center (KCCC), 11 complaints from the Maui Community Correctional Center (MCCC), and 33 complaints from the Oahu Community Correctional Center (OCCC).

Complaints from Women's Hybrid System

The Women's Community Correctional Center (WCCC) functions as the State's only hybrid facility housing the jail and prison population of women. The Commission received 19 complaints from the prison side of WCCC, and four complaints from the jail side of WCCC.

The Commission will continue to report on complaints on a monthly basis based on feedback from the Commissioners and public on what statistics are best to make available. If you have feedback you would like to share regarding complaint information you would like to see, please email us at hcsoc@hawaii.gov.

Findings on Lack of Movement Throughout the Prison System

Concerns Regarding Lack of Bed Utilization at Minimum Custody Facilities

The Commission has consistently reported on concerns regarding a lack of bed utilization at minimum custody facilities. Hawaii has two minimum custody prisons for men - Kulani Correctional Facility (KCF) and Waiawa Correctional Facility (WCF). These facilities are designed for people who pose low public safety risk and are eligible for rehabilitation-focused programming. WCF can hold 334 individuals, and KCF can hold 160 individuals. Despite this:

- Both facilities are less full now than they were in 2023 (WCF is at 50% capacity, KCF is at 48% capacity).
- At the same time, hundreds of people who qualify for minimum custody remain housed in Halawa Correctional Facility (HCF) (a higher-security prison), or Saguaro Correctional Center in Arizona (AZSC) (higher security, out-of-state prison).

The Commission has found that minimum custody beds are sitting empty while eligible individuals are housed in more expensive, more restrictive, and less rehabilitative settings.

The above charts highlight that since 2023, between 200–260 people classified as minimum custody or below have remained in Halawa or Saguaro. Meanwhile, Waiawa’s population dropped consistently from 181 (2023) to 136 (2024) and 165 (2025). In May 2026, for the first time since the Commission has tracked (lack of) movement through the system, Waiawa’s population has increased from its 181 (2023) to 186 (2026). Kulani’s population dropped from 85 (2023) to 78 (2024) to 86 (2025) and 72 (2026). The Commission believes that this is not a year-by-year fluctuation, but a sustained pattern.

Differences Between Minimum and Medium+ Facilities:

Minimum Custody Facilities:

- Are far less restrictive than medium or higher custody prisons
- Focus on:
 - Education
 - Vocational training
 - Substance use treatment
 - Reentry preparation
- Allow more movement, work opportunities, and pro-social behavior
- Are designed to prepare people for successful release

Medium and Higher Custody Facilities:

- Emphasize security and control, not rehabilitation
- Offer fewer programs
- Often have long waitlists for classes or treatment
- Increase the likelihood that individuals:
 - Serve their entire sentence
 - Are released without skills, treatment, or planning

Impact:

Underusing minimum custody facilities increases the risk of people returning to the community unprepared.

When people are housed in higher custody settings than necessary:

- They are less likely to receive:
 - Treatment
 - Job skills
 - Education
- They are more likely to “max out” their sentence and be released with no supervision and no preparation.

By contrast, people in minimum custody are:

- More engaged in programming
- More likely to earn credits
- More likely to transition gradually back into the community

Cost to State:

Cost differences:

- Higher custody incarceration is inherently more expensive as they require:
 - More staffing
 - More security resources

Leaving minimum custody beds empty while paying for higher custody placements is:

- Operationally inefficient
- Financially wasteful
- Contrary to best practice

What the Commission Has Recommended (and Why)

Since 2023, the Commission has recommended transferring eligible minimum custody individuals from Halawa and Saguaro and fully utilizing Kulani and Waiawa. This recommendation aligns custody level with actual risk, maximizes rehabilitative impact, improves reentry outcomes, and uses state facilities as intended. However, the recommendation has not been implemented. The same underutilization continues into 2026.

Although the Commission understands that not all Minimums will be eligible to be in a Minimum facility (based on factors such as finishing programming, waiting for and passing medical clearance, pending misconduct adjudication, etc.), the Commission is still concerned regarding the high number of lower-level classifications in higher level facilities. Leaving minimum custody facilities 50% underused while eligible individuals sit in higher custody settings undermines rehabilitation, public safety, and responsible stewardship of state resources. The Commission will continue to report on this issue until it has been appropriately addressed.
